ABSTRACT

[0068]   A first key is generated, and first validity data is generated based on first backup data and the first key. The first key is sent to a peer storing the first backup data. Second validity data is requested from the peer to determine whether the first backup data is preserved by the peer. The second validity data is based on the first backup data stored by the peer and the first key.